standard grey X button (which I found annoying when I wanted to drag the tab off) I have disabled the close button in Firefox but I'm not sure if this goes backwards. A: You can disable the close buttons with this CSS: `:-moz-any([type="button"], [type="menu"]):-moz-menuitem[disabled="true"], [type="button"], [type="menu"]:not(:-moz-menuitem-text):-moz-menuitem[disabled="true"] { display: none; }` A: Disable the toolbar using the following in CSS `body:-moz-mac-toolbox { display: none; }` This will also hide the top right menu bar. A: Disable the Close button from the right top corner of the browser window. This button is mostly for user notifying that the browser window is closing. But it is useless for me. So I disabled the top right corner of window. This has an advantage that you can't click on the "Close" button if you are moving the mouse cursor on the top right corner. To disable the button use the following code. `/* disable the browser right top corner close button */ button[type="close"] { display:none; }` A. Apostolopoulos, T. Lettl, O. Häffner, W. Dür, and H.
