SHOPPING CART Choosing the Right Parts of a Single Beam LED When figuring out how to build a room with a light fixture, the first thing to consider is what you want the light in the room to do. The choices you make for the lamp and the reflector and the mounts that hold everything in place all effect the look of the room and the light in the room. There are tons of different light options for single beam lamps and reflectors. Every choice you make will have an effect on how you want your room to look, and you can choose whatever you want. If you want just for task lighting, then you don't need a flood lamp to go around the room. Use a spotlight instead. If you want beautiful, soft, even lighting, then you need a more complex setup. A flood lamp with a diffuser will create the gentle effect that you want. A focused, narrow spot light will produce the perfect lighting effect for what you want to do in the room. There are a lot of things you need to consider when choosing the parts of a single beam lamp for your room. Here are a few things to think about: Location of Light Source: Position of Beam Focal length of the lamp: What are you aiming for? Are you aiming for a soft flood light? Is it more of a point light? A narrow beam of a spotlight? What is the distance from your light source to the top of your ceiling?: This will determine the power needed and the distance that you can place your lighting device before you need more power. bff6bb2d33
